SHOCKING PINK ENDORPHINES
Films about women in sport.
Unexpected and highly energetic discoveries.

ART

A second edition, more endorphinic than ever; a discovery of delights from the big screen outside mass media circuits, to be savored in all their intense uniqueness of the moment. On display are both fleeting forays into remote contexts, brought close thanks to the universal language of sport, and stories that are unexpected, even though they arrive from “just around the corner”. Women are at the center of every narrative; not necessarily well-known athletes as much as those who, through different or lesser-known sports, find the strength to challenge conventions, to question their own existence and to look inward as a means to look beyond. From South Africa to Bangladesh, from Canada to Nepal, from Europe to Afghanistan, a changing wave of cinematographic endorphins that does not pass without leaving a mark ... because, in each of these stories, we also find a little bit of ourselves.

> L'AUDITION

Dany Chiasson, Canada (2018), 17min, fiction

In French with Italian subtitles for hearing impaired

Synopsis: Deeply affected by her parent's separation, Marianne makes a deal with her dad: they will be courageous together; he will stop drinking and she will do the audition to be the star of a figure skating show. But will they both maintain their word?

> O TEMPO FUTURO

Xoan Escudero, Spain (2017), 74min, documentary
In Spanish with Italian subtitles for hearing impaired

Synopsis: Bárbara is the first Spanish woman bobsleigh pilot, and she has a dream: to compete at world level. It won't be easy: Bárbara has no support and lives 1,500 km away from the nearest bobsleigh track, in Spain, where bobsleigh is not an established sport. This journey is her big opportunity.
